two or three witnesses in corroboration, Judge Reed granted the decree.

Danielson Case Compromised
Following the short calendar, the jury was impaneled for the case of Charles Barron, or Barry, as he is more commonly called, vs. the Crystal Water company of Danielson. There were exactly 12 jurors in attendance, the balance being either ill or excused.

Attorney Dwyer of Hartford asked a few preliminary questions and appeared satisfied that none of the twelve were prejudiced.

The case was then proceeded with, and after the evidence in both sides was in, Messrs. Searis and Torrey for the defense asked a motion to direct a verdict, which was refused by the court. The question raised was a difficult one, and the court decided against the motion, and the case was about to proceed, with permission to the defense to re-examine the witnesses.

Facts in Barron Case
The facts in the Barron case were that the plaintiff while serving a sentence for intoxication in the Windham county jail in Brooklyn was furnished with a bottle of Crystal Water by the Crystal Water company of Potter street in the town of Danielson, and that the defendant, the Crystal Water company, was liable for the injury.

The point of the defense was that Barron was injured by the defendant company, but that the company of Windham was an independent contractor, and therefore the Crystal Water company was not responsible for the accident. Numerous authorities were cited by both sides in the argument over the point of responsibility, and the case, if continued, would in all probability have gone to the superior court.

Among those who testified in the case were Dr. George M. Burroughs of Danielson, George S. Brown, superintendent of the Crystal Water company, William E. Berry, who was in charge of the prisoners engaged in the work, Gilbert S. Field, deputy justice of the peace, and a fellow prisoner at the time, Henry Little of Plainfield.

At 1:30 o'clock the noon recess was taken and lasted until 2 o'clock, when the judge and members of the bar might attend the funeral of Hon. Huber Clark.
